Women peace campaigners at the Greenham Common cruise missile site in Berkshire expect an eviction attempt on their nain camp today after bailiffs under police protection dis-mantled a smaller camp on local council land last night.

"We know they are coming tomorrow - they told us so", one of the women outside the US Air Force base said. The camp was later moved to Department of Transport land. The women were taken by surprise as the bailiffs began clearing their Newbury District Council's new policy to remove "squatters". The protesters loaded up as many things as they could save and moved to a 'safe house".

One woman said there had been many police at the camp but there had been no arrests. The chief executive of the council, Mr Brian Thetford, said that no personal belongings were being removed.

Newbury District Council is to decide next week whether to try again to evict members of the main Greenham Common peace camp after intensifying its efforts against satellite camps around the cruise missile base. Mr Brian Therford, chief executive of the council, acknowledged yesterday that "we will never secure the total removal of it while part of it is on Department of Transport land". but he added: "If the district council is seen to be taking positive action then sooner or ater the Department of Transport might feel equally courageous and remove the from their land".

The man, whose name was not disclosed, had denied the charge and elected to go for Acton Crown Court in West London. He failed to turn up yester-

Hang glider pilots fear jet collision

a statement how her brother.

A growing number of close encounters between low-flying military jets and hang gliders soaring above hill ridges in Lancashire and Yorkshire has alarmed the British Hang Gliding Association.

A leading article in the latest issue of its magazine Wings says that a collision is likely. The magazine reports an incident when powered hang glider travelling at 35mph 1,000 feet above the Lancashire countryside was confronted by The glider pilot tilted his blue and yellow fabric wings at the jets to alert them and one of the Buccaneers broke away, having flown 70 feet over his-head. The second jet passed only 300 feet away. Another hang glider had reached 170feet above Wether Fell, near Hawes, North Yorkshire, when a Tornado sircraft flew underneath it.

An official of the association said: "There is usually a very good local relationship with the RAF, who are informed whenever a hang gliding site becomes active. The danger is almost always from jets on low-flying missions from air stations further afield. They include British and American aircraft and those from other natio ities. They practice low flying in areas that are legitmately used by hang gliding."

He added "There are occasions when jets fly blind over hilltops below the 250ft minimum. Hang gliders are not always easy to spot by a pilot travelling at high speed and all the ingredients are there for a serious and tragic accident." He said that a hang glider lot could be killed if his aircraft were struck by the violent wake of a close-passing

The association resents the plication la some military Mr Stan Abbott, editor of Wings, said: "These incidents have taken place in free airspace where hang gilders have every right to fly and where it is a clear responsibility of the powered aircraft pilot to avoid a collision. "Large areas of British airspace are already 'sterilized' to private flying because they are military training areas. Sarely there is enough room there for the military to practice. Otherwise the old maxim that steam should give way to sail should prevail", Mr How safe is home gliding? See

Slow monitoring blamed for drug disasters

The slowness of the Govern-ment's system of monitoring harmful new drugs was to blame for some medical disas-ters, rather than pharmaceutical industry mistakes, Professor George Teeling-Smith told the British Association yesterday.

In principle, there was no way that a government could anticipate the next calamity, it was much more likely the scientists in industry might be able to predict possible hazards with their own new compounds, although past experience had shown that even that was not always possible.

The Government's measure to monitor adverse reaction, the system of "yellow cards" filled in by doctors to record such reactions, was too slow for monitoring purposes.

Americans return to the gas guzzler

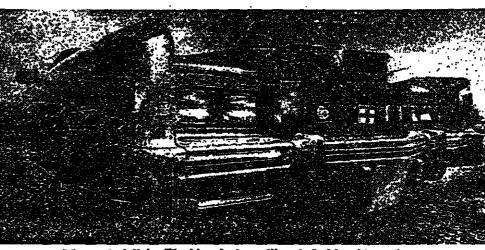

From Trevor Fishlock

Out of the shadows of shame the big American car is emerging again into the sun-light of popular approval.

After being put behind the wheels of smaller cars by the 1970s oil crisis and the skill of foreign car makers, Americans are returning in their thousands to their true love: the big, fat, plushy, squashy gas-guzzler, the traditional and ever present prop on the American stage. Suddenly there are smiles again in Detroit, the auto-mobile captital. Manufacturers cannot produce limousines fast enough to meet demand. Car sales are the best for four years, and sales ot large cars in July were up by a third compared with the same month last year. Ford, Chrysler and General Motors are expected to make £3.3 billion net profit this year, roughly what they lost in 1980-1982.

With optimism running high, it cannot be long before Motown businessmen revive the grace once intoned before a businessmen's lunch a few years ago: "Almighty God, we thank thee for the wheel, for the person who made it into a vehicle, for those who produce it, and bless us who use it.

Motown's delight: The big, plush roadliner is fashionable again.

Americans have always liked owning big cars, symbols of the full and abundant life. From the dawn of the motor age the broad-shouldered car with a billiard-table bonnet and a bowling-ally boot seemed and indispensable part of the American scene and dream, a keystone of culture, social intercourse and the American rites of courtship.

The oil crisis made Americans reconsider their relationship with cars, one of the momentous readjustments of their history. On economists' orders, a people raised on big steaks and big cars found themselves having to buy smaller cars. Suddenly it seemed selfish and even uppa triotic to have a big car. And when people found that smaller American cars were not available or not good enough. foreign cars were there to meet

Mr Ralph Nader, the American consumer activist, had already accused car manufacturers of putting profits and style before safety and quality, and safety legislation and foreign competition has led to a reform of ideas in the motor industry. For a long time American cars have not had a good reputation in respect of quality, and Detroit today is potting an emphasis on better design, engineering and finish. There is still a question-mark over some American cars, however. The Government is suing General Motors to make them recall 1.1m cars with suspected brake defects. The Government alleges that the defects led to 15 deaths and that GM tried to cover up the faults.

The renewal of the American love affair with the big car is also, ironically, getting the manufacturers into trouble with the Government.

Chad envoy plays down his recall

From Diana Geddes

Mr Ahmad Allam-Mi. Chad's Charge d'Affaires in Paris, tried vesterday to dispel suspicion that his recall to Ndjamena was finked with Chad's disapproval of President Mitterrand's comments on the possible creation of a federation in Chad or his lack of support for a counter-offensive against the Libyan-backed rebels.

Mr Allam-Mi said his recall, which came immediately after the publication of M Mitterrand's interview on Chad in Le Monde, was for "regular consul-ations" with officials in Ndjamena, and had nothing to do with the French President's statement. He is due to leave

Paris on Monday.

Earlier, he had expressed satisfaction that M Mitterrand had confirmed France's firm support for the Chad Govern-ment against the "Libyan aggressor". There was no dispute between France and President Hissene Habre: the misunderstandings had been cleared up, he insisted.

But sources in Ndjamena indicated that Chad government officials are concerned about President Mitterrand's strong hints that the French sive against the key town of Faya-Lageau, and about his proposal for a federation

The indication of these problems came this week from a reservist who had just finished his term of duty at the camp. He wrote: "it is no longer clear who is whose prisoner".

The reservist, who claimed that the Israelis were losing control, added: "At night, you can clearly hear the sounds of underground tunnelling. All of Ansar is sitting on an underground tunnel system. Taking the wind from Malta's sail

From Wigg Madrid Madrid

While Malta continued yester day to withhold approval of the final document which would permit foreign ministers to conclude the European security review conference in Madrid next month, the 34 other delegations were trying to curb Valletta's opportunities for a propaganda exercise.

Spain's invitation to foreign ministers to mark by their presence in Madrid from September 7-9 the spirit of East-West détente has significantly reduced the importance of Malta's obstructionist tactics But the problem remains of deciding what conference sessions are to be held between now and then.

An attempt by neutral countries on Thursday night to gain Maltese approval of a compro-mise formula on Mediterranean security met with a rebuff.

Mr Evarist Saliba, the chief Maltese delegate, said after-wards that his Government wanted the other 34 nations to extend moral and material which Malta and other partici-pating Mediterranean states may launch in the post-Madrid meeting period" concerning security in that region. This was rejected by Western delegations as a demand for a blank cheque.

For those who remember the fiery speeches Mr Amin Gemayel, the Lebanese President, made at the UN last year and his moving addresses to rallies when he was a young Deputy, his televised speech on Thursday night was sobering. Wearing a dark suit, he faced the nation and appealed for help in his efforts to deploy the Lebanese Army in the troubled Chouf mountains. No doubt his mood reflected the uncertainty the country is facing as the time for Israeli redeployment nears. As one leftwing newspaper, As Safir, put it, Mr Gemayel personified the calm before the storm.

In his speech, the President said: "The hour of challenge is approaching", and called on his

I suppose many of us entertain the reassuring notion that, in the wake of William Wilberforce, and whatever else may be wrong with the world, we have at least been able to leave behind us the condition in which one man actually owns another as his property. Not quite so. In The Unbroken Line (Radio 4, August 23; producer, Jock Gallagher) Adam Raphael was able to give instances not only of practices which amount to slavery (debt-bondage in India, the enticement of jobless American workers into labour camps where they are held by force and without proper pay), but of the present day ownership of one human being by

In Mauritania in West Africa, slavery was last outlawed three years ago – after several previous and unsuccessful enactments - and still it has not disappeared. Indeed it cannot disappear for it seems that the Mauritanian economy would collapse without it. Free the slaves, compel their owners to pay them and these owners would quite simply be unable to do so. A few might be retained as paid servants, the rest— amounting to many thousands would end up on the streets, deprived of any means of support. In such a case, at such a time, effective abolition would apparently be worse than the offence, for the slave's lot is not always wretched: there are good masters as well as bad.

Raphael's other examples, though arguably not out and out slavery, were to my mind more squalid and disheartening because they all involved an element of callous deceit. The Haitian authorities knowingly engage large numbers of their own black people to cut cane for the mestizos of the neighbouring Dominican Republic (who don't stoop to such work) under conditions which the victims only later discover to be

Indian labourers acquire anavoidable debts to their landfords and are then trapped for life, never earning enough cash to discharge the debt, which may only be the equivalent of £10. We heard a landlord declare that he paid his workers not in kind but cash (as he is supposed to) and assert that they had only told the BBC they were under debt-bondage so as to underpin their claim for government handout. No doubt it happens, but that still leaves a proportion of the landlords lying their heads off. Not quite the programme Wilberforce might have hoped for to mark the 150th anniversary of abol-

EDINBURGH FESTIVAL

John Higgins introduces the Opera Theatre of St Louis, the first American opera company to come to the Festival, and its creator, Richard Gaddes

The choice of the first American opera company to visit Edin-burgh has fallen on the Opera Theatre of St Louis, Ten years ago there was virtually no grand opera in St Louis. The town, which is bisected by the Missouri, relied for its summer music on "the Muni", the Municipal Opera in the city park which supplied, and still supplies, the usual summer stock season of Porter and Kern, Rodgers and Hammerstein, with a big star in each show. In the winter there is, of course, the St Louis Symphony.

The man who introduced opera to St Louis, and vice versa, in this century is Richard Gaddes, an Englishman who learned his trade at Glyndebourne and then Santa Fe before setting up his own company in the Mid-West. During its eight seasons to date the Opera Theatre has attracted both acclaim and critical attention - the last four have all been reported on this page. The reason takes little seeking from the outset Gaddes has been determined to introduce the unfamiliar both in terms of citizens make up the entire casts and that put paid to that. As with the operas, so with As with the operas, so with the singers. Gaddes decided to steer away from the hardened campaigners of the touring circuit and instead took a chance on singers just embarking on their careers. Here the background of Glyndebourne and Santa Fe clearly had an and Santa Fe clearly had an influence, because both houses have for long had a justified reputation for seeking out and nurturing young talent. Gaddes, however, added another however, added another element in vocal terms he was determined to buy American, although his producers and conductors could come from elsewhere.

> "What's to be Found in the Operatic Attic?" was a New York Times headline for a report on the last St Louis season. And Gaddes reckons that he spends quite a few happy hours up there under the eaves. He also thinks that the Edinburgh repertory virtually selected itself. "There was originally talk of Rossini's La cenerentola, which Jonathan Miller wanted to direct with Frederica von Stade in the title role. But then Jonathan decided to leave the theatre altogether approached me I was riding high on the success of Fennimore. It was a new style of production and it also reflected, I suppose, my natural tendency to shy away from standard pieces. That was our English connexion. So we then needed the American connexion. The first act of Postman had just arrived on my desk and I thought it had a very reasonable chance of being a success.

"Maybe it was an irrespon-sible risk. We'll see. I'm fully aware that there has been little exposure over here to American opera. And those who go along expecting to hear something in the style of Britten, Walton or in Act II. But let's hope that reviewed overseas."

The St Louis visit came about almost by accident. The first choice of John Drummond, Edinburgh's Festival Director, was Santa Fe. but the nego-tiations fell through. He bum-ped into Richard Gaddes one day at the Metropolitan Museum in New York and the deal was virtually arranged on the spot. St Louis have not previously played outside their home state, although they were on the verge of going to Monte Carlo a couple of years ago. Gaddes believes that the time is now right for a limited amount of exposure abroad.

Usher Hall

So urging an undercurrent is the Vienna 1900 theme of this Edinburgh Festival that almost every concert has one rushing back mentally to the main festival exhibition. There we were in the Usher Hall on Thursday, listening to a per-formance of Schoenberg's Erwartung such as can rarely have been equalled, knowing that only half a mile away in the National Museum of Antiquities rest for the moment a selection of his paintings on the subject and a page of his manuscripts.

All the books tell us that Schoenberg composed his fevered operatic monlogues in nine days, from which might one suppose the autograph is one long Beethovenian scrawl. Not a bit of it. The notation resembles rather that neat. precise, little caligraphy of a Webern, and whether Claudio Abbado has seen it or not, he certainly knows that the plung-ing speed, the variety and the intensity of Schoenberg's expressions depend on the realization being as near perfect as human musicians can make it. The London Symphony Orchestra came pretty close.

I wondered if the score can ever have sounded so surely beautiful. The obvious opportunities for beauty are there, of course, in the odd strands of rearning string music that come like dislocated memories of earlier, more innocent music, perhaps even of Strauss Waltzes. Mr Abbado and his players duly made these sing. But their rarer accomplishment was to defeat ugliness of sound wherever it became possible, not by muting effects but rather by placing them like stars against a great, distant vault. The menace was still there, in the rattle of low harps, the march of a bass calrinet, the shriek of trumpets, but added to it was an extraordinary appeal. Erwartung turns out to be a score brimming over with icy sensuousness, not just a nightmare.

As such it provides all the decor the work needs. No visible scenery could possibly keep up with the pace of performance like this, and Schoenberg's own smudgy canvasses are surely not stage designs but only attempts to set down instants from perform-ances going on inside his head.

Afterwards came something almost as uncommon: a per-formance of the "Eroica" Symphony that sounded heroic but never vainly so. The LSO were in resplendent form, the wind led by delightful soles from flute and oboe, the strings quick in response to changes of colour and texture, the three horns nicely cast as rough diamonds with the mud of the chase on their boots. And Mr Abbado directed them superbly forward to the splendours of Wagner and Bruckner but kept the comparative naivety of Vienna 1900.

Covent Garden

Sorry to have to start with a grouch, but as Thursday night vas the second consecutive performance when the Covent Garden interval bells were on the blink, they ought to have found some alternative way of getting people back into their seats. How could anyone give proper attention to so involved a work as Concerto for Two Solo Pianos while interrupted by noisily shuffling late-comers stumbling through the dark and crossing one's view of the stage? I hope it was not only that problem which made me think that it was almost the end of the first movement before Peter Martins's choreography began to get to grips with Stravinsky's music. Once Heather Watts was on stage. Martins's understand-ing of her individual quality produced some fascinating movement - quirky, angular solos; duets with oblique balances and turning falls.

The evening's other London premiere was Souvenir de Florence, in which John Taras decks out a minor Tchaikovsky suite with conventional encounters and yearnings, all soaked in a heavy fake-Russian sauce. In a less distinguished repertory it Peter Davalle nian's costumes. The men look

In country houses, and city mansions he was always in demand: charming, affable. talented and generous, his presence ensured the success of any house-party, reception or dinner.

Readers may justifiably imagine that we are back in the palmy days of Tsar Alexander II, when peace reigned from Baltic to Pacific, the spirit of revolution had been stilled, and the Russian nobility led a life of unimaginable luxury and pleasure. Those unfamiliar with Russian history may be surprised to learn that Count Tolstoy's Elysian holiday was not spent in the summer of 1890 . . . but that of 1940. Twenty-three years earlier revolution had swept away Russia's aristocracy in torrents of blood, and in its place had proudly risen the world's first socialist and again attacked the playwright for having "distorted history". He took the hint properly in the third version. A totally new Peter trod the boards: a calmly beneficient ruler, devoted only to the reconstruction of his country, quite tectotal and virtually chaste, and hated only by foreigners. In the first the pathetic Tsarevich Alexei is opposed to his overriding father on personal grounds, but in the 1938 version (the year of the Munich crisis) it turns out he was planning to betray the country to the Germans. All this of course involved conscious distortions of history. which Tolstoy appears to have been happy to perpetrate. What mattered was not to relate his Peter to the ardent Soviet admirers; though at Peter of history, but to his twentieth-century successor. Tolstoy's reward was commensurate with his efforts. He received the Stalin Prize of 100,000 roubles and was enabled to enjoy a lavish lifestyle. In Stalin's eyes to be the apotheosis of Peter the Great conferred enormous benefits. It exonerated the fearful suffering inflicted by a Russian autocrat on his people, on the grounds that this was a necessary sacrifice on Russia's path to greatness. It required a man of gigantic courage, prepared if necessary to sink his arms to the elbows in blood, to drag this stagnant country forwards.

consident of the required attitude, intervened to suggest a more tactful version.) Most startling of all was the elevation to generous patriot of the sadistic chief of the oprichniki, Malyuta Skuratov, Clearly Stalin believed that Beria too deserved some credit. Finally, in his novel Bread, Alexei abandoned allegory and gave his public Stalin in person as hero. The theme was the siege of Tsaritsyn (afterwards Stalingrad) in 1918. Stalin's unbelievable heroism under fire and cool organization of victory is described in ecstatic terms, and contrasted the unspeakable Trotsky's blackhearted treachery. The story (published in 1938) was so faise and fawning as since to have embarrassed even Tolstoy's most the time nervous reviewers naturally hailed it as his greatest achievement. Tolstoy's assistance to Stalin during this dangerous period was considerable. After the death of Gorky in 1936 he was considered Soviet Russia's greatest writer. His better works gained international respect as inspired literature. Sustained by his solid prestige Tolstov's historical novels underlined the inevitability of the communist triumph and portrayed in vivid colours Stalin's two greatest predecessors, who like him had been reluctantly obliged to inflict colossal suffering on the people in order to achieve Russia's greatness. As Three Tolstoys: Leo. Alexei and Nikolai. In his book, from which this article is extracted. The book is *The Tolstoys: Twenty*four Generations of Russian History 1353-1983, to be published by Hamish Hamilton on Monday price £12.50.

There was another significant aspect one which in all probability accounts for Tolstoy's immunity from harm during the lopping of thousands of loyal heads in the late 1930s. Toistoy had been at pains in his novel to remind his readers that the Tsar's ablest servant had been another Count Tolstoy. Peter Andreevich. Peter Tolstoy had initially joined Tsar Peter's enemies, but after staying in Western Europe returned to render his master brilliant services. But it was not so much this parallel which struck Stalin, but that with Count Leo Tolstoy. The greatest ornament of nineteenth-century Russian culture had been one Tolstoy, and now Stalin's Russia possessed another. The leader's immortality was assured.

The elevation of Stalin-Peter was far from being Alexer Tolstoy's only service to his master. It had not escaped his notice that a far more apt parallel was to be found in the prison of Tsar Ivan the Terrible. who had organized an effective predecessor of the NKVD, the oprichniki, with which he waged war on the Russian people. In 1942 Alexei began work on two plays depicting Ivan the Terrible's heroic struggle to create a modern Russian state. Maybe he killed vast numbers of people, but this was necessary in order to overcome the fractious dissent of the boyars and the ignorance of the people. As for the oprichniki, well, they were a selfsacrificing group of warriors devoted to pretecting the country. (Tolstoy's original version had them defending the autocracy; but Stalin himself propaganda for internal and external consumption it was superb. It touched precisely the chord to which impressionable foreigners responded so well.

Many of the themes and revisions of Tolstoy's writings were directly suggested to him by Stalin himself. and the author was at times ready to oblige by some new convolution of ideas. His services did not pass unrewarded.

He and his wife settled down in baronial style in a rambling, manyroomed mansion stocked with rich antiques", by the Catherine Park at Detskoe Selo, outside Petrograd (soon afterwards Leningrad). It was surrounded by a cool garden, overlooked by a terrace, where the author loved to stroll of an evening and prune his roses.

Alexei Tolstoy's other house at Barvikha was the greatest draw for Moscow high society. High party officials, actors, writers, and ballerinas vied with each other to obtain the entrée. He was after all an internationally famous writer, bore one of the most famous mames in Russian history, and was the only nobleman publicly surviving in the country. Alexei's relations or other noblemen now in exile might have found the pose of grand seigneur ang a little false, for despite his incestry Tolstoy had not been prought up or ever moved in stristocratic society. But they were far away, and with the Soviet clite he did very well.

ever known during the reign of Nicholas II. Stalin himself is said to have addressed him as "Count". In the 1930s Alexei was loud in his condemnation of fascism. There was, however, a time when his hostility to Nazism vanished utterly; when it was discovered that Hitler and the Nazis were really very admirable people, and that the alliance signed in August 1939 served Soviet interests to perfection. On September 17, 1939 the Red Army invaded eastern Poland, having waited cautiously for over a fortnight until the Germans had crushed major Polish resistance. The next day in the Soviet newspaper Izvestia there appeared a long article by Tolstoy, exulting over the collapse of the Polish state.

it may appear small-minded to note that Tolstoy may have had a personal interest in the invasion. When Wilno was occupied by the Red Army in 1939-40, he sent an agent to buy up the cellar of the best hotel for his own private use.

It came as a very nasty shock to the Soviet Government when Hitler ungratefully launched his next attack against the Soviet Union itself. Everyone suddenly remembered how fervently anti-fascist they had always been, and none more so than Alexei Tolstoy. If barrages of clichés could have saved the day the German Army would never have crossed the Niemen. Everything was turned on its head overnight.

Tolstoy's belligerent journalism grew ever more strident as he hastily removed himself hundreds of miles away from the front. He settled firstly at Murom, 150 miles east of Moscow. But by November the Germans were on the outskirts of the capital, and Tolstoy flew to Tashkent, nearly 2,000 miles away amid the mountains of central Asia There he made his major contribution to the war effort, penning article after article urging the valiant Red Army to ever more heroic efforts and self-sacrifice.

There was no lie or crime of the Soviet Government to which Tolstoy was not prepared to lend his name. But a life of unstinted moral and physical self-indulgence took its toll. By the time he was 61, the flesh hung loosely on his heavily-built frame. Early in June 1944 he attended the exclusive Kremlin Hospital for a medical examination. A cancerous turnour was discovered under X-ray for which no operation was feasible, and the doctors estimated that he had only some six to eight months to live. The dire prognosis was concealed from the patient, but it could not be long before he became aware of the shortening hours.

In September he suddenly began to plan a gigantic new work on the Great Patriotic War, then entering its decisive stages. Perhaps this at last would rival War and Peace, and he began to talk of a megalomaniac artistic conception "embracing the whole world and every nation"

But time was galloping now. In the same month he entered a luxury sanatorium for the Party elite outside Moscow. In November the doctors concluded decisively that no hope of recovery was possible. All that could be done was to keep him comfortable. He returned home to the great mansion at Barvikha for the New Year, and on January 10, 1945 his family and friends gathered round his bedside for his sixtysecond birthday. Six weeks later he was dead.

It is hard not to believe that the degrading personal role he undertook in Soviet society exerted a damaging effect on his creative capacity. His personal character was without question beneath contempt. reflecting the pitiful morality of many contemporary European intellectuals. There was no lie, betraval or indignity which he would not hasten to commit in order to fill his pockets, and in Stalin he found a worthy master.

supposed to have been planted in 1815 and acts as a mucmonic for the date of the battle of Waterloo but, in another sense, it is the first tree that ever really got to know well. It has been a good friend and a noble teacher because I have been frantically looking at and planting trees ever since.

It is an even better inspiration to be exposed to the enthusiasms of a genuine "tree man". The late Sir Richard Cotterell, a peppery soul and guardian of a mighty Repton landscape, was such. His eye and mind were all trees. Once, to mark the coronation, he walked me round his creation. Queen's Wood, just outside Hereford. We paused at each tree or group of trees, considered its form and shape, when it was planted, and its rate of growth. There was almost a solemnity about our stately progress.

With another "tree man", Lawrence Banks, one swoops from one trunk to the next at Hergist Croft, exclaiming over its texture and colour with a fervour of aesthetic appeciation more generally applied to an antique textile. It is always exciting to be in touch with a way of ooking at things which most of us bypass. For most ordinary mortals, trees are just things that happen to be there. I would quite like one day to go on a great trees of Britain tour in the same way as we visit out cathedrals or country houses. I for one have already begun to compile a personal anthology of favourites. I would have to begin with the ancient oaks of England, and none for me can surpass those in the royal chase at Hatfield. I was once taken to see them by the late Dowager Marchioness of Salisbury in a hairraising cross-field expedition to trace the eighteenth-century road that still remains there, a monument to times past when roads actually went round trees. There they were, vast gnarled specimens that must have witnessed many a royal hunting party, and beneath one of which the young Elizabeth I was sitting on the November day that the news came from London of her sister's death.

That, sadly, is now only a stump, so I would have to include another royal tree, the Boscobel oak, or rather its descendant. That still flourishes, although I have only seen it across the fields from the mount in the garden. The original perished as a result of the onslaught of souvenir hunters avid for twigs and whole branches. I would also have to include the vast evergreen or holm oak at Westbury-upon-Severn,

A cedar of Lebanon guards our bouse. I look out on it as I write. It is supposed to have been planted in the elms of Worcestershire would also have figured but, alas, are no more part of the elegisc pattern of Elgar's landscape. The only fruit trees that stick in my mind are those trained into extraordinary shapes. There is a spectacular group at Powis Castle, first glimpsed from above. They have been tied and trained into orderly domes as exact as though they had been composed with the sweep of a compass arc. At Barnsley House, Gloucestershire, the new potager has, as centre points of the vegetable beds, apple trees trained as crowns. And there is the marvellous avenue of venerable, espaliered apple trees that leads away from Cranborne Manor towards great gates and the beyond.

And that brings me to avenues. The majestic sweep of sweet chestnus down the hill away from Croft Castle would come high on my list. So would the pleached lime avenue at Sissinghurst, Kent. I would add to this the Lombardy poplar avenue planted by the late Duke of Wellington in the house he lived in near Stratfield Saye in Hampshire, arranged in a steep false perspective up towards the skyline and thus seeming to stretch into

Does the stilt hedge of hornbeam at Hidcote, Gloucestershire, count? hope so, as I have a personal treatment of trees which must be anathema to the pure "tree man". John Fowler copied this effect for his Gothic lodge in his minute masterpiece of a garden which would also have to be included. He once taught me how to get mistletoc to grow in the boughs of fruit trees. but I have never been able to achieve it.

But perhaps my favourite single tree is one just outside Stow-on-the-Wold, by which I have driven times without number. It is a variety of acer palmatum, a small tree with a crown of leaves which unfuri in the spring, blush pink streaked with the palest green. Perfect in form, it arises at the side of an entrance to a great house directly opposite the lodge. Every spring one waits for the magic moment when this astonishing beacon blazes once more. I always feel grateful to whoever planted it for siting this rare and exotic tree where everyone who drives along the road from Tewkesbury to Burford over the Cotswolds can savour its glory. Making tracks to childhood

As everyone knows, this is not the around Llanelli, where an engine at Age of the Train. Not the age of the nightmail crossing the border but the container lorry careering across the safety barrier. The age of the train was vesterday, childhood, another country, and those of us who enjoy railways resent British Rail's lie because the attempt at now-ness robs trains of glamour. For who plays lorry drivers? What boy in his right mind arranges motorway pile-ups on his bedroom floor? Could anyone travel hopefully on a day trip to Victoria coach station? Or make a hit of "Pardon me. boy, is that the inter-city diesel"? And who can forget the excursions of childhood? I remember as though it were last week the waking before dawn for fear everyone else would oversleep, the wolfed bacon sandwich and mug of tea. the last chance to do number ones in case the train had no corridor. All five of us squeezed into the tiny car for a short drive to the local station of Craven Arms, where we crossed the footbridge to the down platform, already packed with other parents and their children, burdened with packed lunch and swimming togs.

While adults swapped weather forecasts, most children looked up the track towards Shrewsbury for the 6.50, all four carriages of it. We wanted to sit near the driver but an officious guard directed us further

Now the sun was up, promising yet another glorious day of the kind we seldom see any more. Weeks of tropical warmth had not forewarned the crew, and radiators belched hot air till a father went to complain. The view as we gathered speed enhanced even familiar villages like Broome, Bucknell and Hopton Heath but after Knuckle Halt the 13arched viaduct took us across the border into a foreign country short on vowels and strong on I's. Llangunllo, Llanbister Road and Troedrhiwsedwen plunged us into Abroad, the halts hardly long enough to read the names.

The next three towns had all become Something Wells when the line was built in 1865, bringing these remote drovers' towns within reach metropolitan hypochondriacs. Llandrindod, Llangammarch and Llanwrtyd joined the roster of spas. A shed at one is said still to be full of the abandoned crutches of satisfied customers - a touch of PR to equal BR - and trains on this line literally took the waters, bottles of barium by the crateful to connect at Swansea so that London health-freaks could complete their cures at home. All we saw from the carriage was a Hollywood swimming pool beside a great hotel.

After Sugar Loaf Summit, the way was all descent, through a deep tunnel and over another high viaduct with amazing views of a wooded valley. The beauty was almost monotonous - sheep fording streams, anglers waving from river banks, hikers on a suspension bridge - but relief came when we reached Poppy, was produced by the RSC last the gruesome collieries and works year.

Swansea. Our family was led by its Welsh mother to buy cockles and edible seaweed in the covered market and by noon we were on Rotherslade Beach, paddling in icy water but dried in seconds by the blaze of sun. Another world, where parents climbed to sit on a hotel terrace with pints and Pernods, watching the tide go out.

Did "Pernods" give the game away? There is a very good reason why I remember all this as clearly as though it were last week. It was last week. Last Saturday's £5.25 return excursion on The Heart of Wales line - 200 miles from our new home near Craven Arms to my wife's birthplace by the sea.

I could not have described the hotel bar in pre-war terms, not with all those thic beach people doing the St Tropez in briefs and bikinis and gold chains at necks and ankles. After drinks, we watched a good men's doubles some yards from the sands, visited an aunt, drank lager in the Dylan Tavern on Mumbles front, rode back in an open-top bus along Swansea Bay's promenade and caught our return train at seven.

In one respect, steam was never as good as diesel. Now you can see what the driver sees, watch him changing keys and tokens with signalmen, blowing horns at farm crossings and wish him "goodnight" as he changes trains at Llanwrtyd with the crew of the Shrewsbury Show Special, so that he can be home in Swansea by bedtime. The last driver told me he had been on the line all his working life, starting as a fireman in the days when they had fires.

There is no logical reason why this line should continue. Butcher Beeching must have looked at the cost - now said to be £3,000 per passenger-journey - and longed to close it; Mauler Marsh tried to but it passed through several marginal Labour seats and just survived. If the bridges start to go or the tunnels give, the axe will fall.

At Craven Arms, lit only by moon and stars, the platform filled again as we all got off. "Looks like the whole population," said the guard. His words rang a bell and some days later I recalled the original. Lt David Tinker, killed on HMS Glamorgan just over a year ago, wrote of the Falklands: "It is, after all, only a rock with a village population on it: more people live in Craven Arms." And no one effectively challenges the billions that will be spent on the islanders.

Wave a flag, beat a drum and politics becomes the art of the impossible. I am recruiting a band of terrorists to undermine the viaducts and harry the diesels. Then perhaps they will send a task force and what they have won they will have to maintain. It's worth fighting for, The Heart of Wales.

A GRAVEL VOICE FROM ETTRICK

Tweeddale, Ettrick and Rambouillet has put his party in a tizzy. The tone suggests that the post-influenzal asthenia of which his GP has spoken has not completely cleared up. The content makes it certain that the party's conference next month will be an acrimonious affair.

It was heading that way in any case. Sections of the party are still sore that the joint manifesto to which the Liberal leadership subscribed with their partners in the SDP was over-compromised. In particular it kept options open about the stationing of cruise missiles in Britain instead of coming out against it as the Liberal assembly had done, and it omitted mention of blood sports. So there is a move to strip the party leader of his final say on the manifesto.

Mr Steel has quite rightly made this a matter fundamental to his remaining leader. What matters is not that the last word on the manifesto should be personal to the leader but that it should remain with the parliamentary leadership and not be given to some extra-parliamentary body. With the awful warning before them of what happened to the Labour Party when it fought an election on a manifesto which most of its shadow ministers would have liked to disavow and had to explain away, and with a wellorganized move to block the proposed amendment, it is unlikely that the critics of Mr Steel's "autocratic" leadership will win that point against him.

Mr Steel's letter ranges more widely than the details of the party constitution. It enters into personalities. He demands to know why Mr Tony Greaves has not been up before a drum-head court martial for disgraceful conduct in the face of the enemy. Mr Greaves is chairman of the Association of Liberal Councillors which put out a distancing document of its own about policy in the course of the election campaign. He represents the pavement school of Liberal politics, which has usually been at odds with the party's shadow statesmen. Mr Steel also demands to know wby someone is not doing something about the Young Liberals, cavorting with Mr Ken Livingstone and Sinn Fein, and vulnerable, he suspects, to entryism. He also has a smack at Mr Cyril Smith for not putting his weight in the Liberal "front bench" in the Commons.

One had supposed that since Mr Steel has so long and so successfully laboured in the vineyard of the Liberal party he must have become acclimatized to the disorderly dottiness that has always enriched its proceedings. Something has now happened to turn indulgence into exasperation.

That something - apart from any change in how Mr Steel personally is feeling - must be the fact that the Liberal party now stands within reach of political power. It is no longer just a ginger group, a vehicle for political ideas on their way in or their way out, a phenomenon of the Celtic fringe, a gymnasium for working out political fantasies. There is now a real possibility that it may come to government.

Mrs Thatcher, according to an the psychology of Liberalism.

interview she gave the other day, now sees the Liberal party in that light. It is certainly Mr Steel's ambition to make it so. That was the heart of the letter.

I am certainly willing and indeed keen to continue as leader. but only on the basis that the party itself is gearing its efforts to offering an alternative govern-ment to Mrs Thatcher at the next general election. If it wants to potter about on the sidelines I will be happy to remain a loyal member but not to continue indefinitely as leader.

Mr Steel is not the first leader of the Liberal Party to try to galvanize his membership in the serious pursuit of political power. Mr Grimond marched his troops towards the sound of gunfire (imagery antly presaging slaughter), and Mr Thorpe whetted their appetite with the red meat of politics. But Mr Steel is the first postwar Liberal leader to stand in a position from which the appeal sounds forth as more than braggadocio.

If the Liberal Party is to convince the voters that its thrust and its men are fit to be trusted with a primary share in government it will have to reform its political manners. Responsibility calls forth another style. If Prince Hal is to become King Harry, foolishness will have to be banished from the court. The party will also have to get its developing relationship with the Social Democratic Party right. Mr Steel is abundantly justified in trying to concentrate the minds of his colleagues and supporters on these matters ahead of their annual conference. Whether his form a major part of the first abrasive way of doing it will go alternative to Conservative down well or badly is at this stage a question for specialists in

ODD MAN OUT AT MADRID

Plucky little Malta again stands relations have provided more couraged by the support he alone, defending itself from the combined onslaught of the thirty-four other countries represented at the European security conference in Madrid. It is a matter of considerable significance that a meeting of foreign ministers next month could provide an opportunity for the US Secretary of State George Shultz to hold talks with the Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in an effort to improve relations between the superpowers. But the Maltese delegation appears to give more weight to including in the final conference document an agreement on holding discussions on security and arms reductions in the Mediterranean area. Insisting on these worthy aims, however, has prevented the participating countries - the United States, Canada and all European states except Albania reaching the consensus required for the formal signing of the document concluding the threeyear Madrid follow-up to the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe (CSCE). In desperation Spain has now arranged a "political meeting" in September to endorse the final agreement, but unless Malta yeilds beforehand, this will not have formal CSCE standing.

to keep delegates arguing interminably without introducing the Pandora's box of the Mediterranean and Middle East. Nonetheless, at Helsinki in 1975 Malta managed to insert in the Final Act a vague reference to the relationship which exists "in the broader context of world security, between security in Europe and security in the Mediterranean area. At Belgrade in 1978 Malta pressed successfully for a gathering of experts on Mediterranean cooperation to be held the following year in Valetta, but at the Madrid follow-up the Maltese delegation failed to win support even from the non-aligned countries Neither the Finns nor the Swedes succeeded with their compromise proposals, and in a rare show of agreement both the United States and the USSR have denounced Malta for blocking the conclusion of the conference.

In Malta itself Mr Dom Mintoff's ruling Labour Party is opposed on this issue by the Nationalist Party, which argues that he has no mandate from the other Mediterranean countries to speak on their behalf, and agrees with the general European view that his proposals are impracti-The strains in East-West cal Mr Mintoff, however, en-

The real significance of the CSCE is as an international of human rights in participating countries - an element in the trust without which no genuine disarmament is possible. Yet delegates have agreed to hold a European disarmament conference next January in Stockholm. allowing Moscow to treat it as a separate and more important matter than the discussions on human rights at Ottawa in May 1985 and on family reunification in Berne in April 1986 - to be held only months before the next general follow-up conference in Vienna.

The principles underlying disarmament and human rights are related and should be defended with the stubbornness now shown by Malta in less practical ways. The frustration felt by negotiators at the CSCE is understandable, but for all its shortcomings it is a forum worth preserving.

SHAKEN TO THE CORE

A claim that parts of Kent and earthquakes: A spokesman for Canvey Island, with its vulner- the Cabinet Office, which houses able concentration of oil and gas the Civil Contingencies Unit. installations, could be hit by a "large earthquake" invites scepticism, like a report that the Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse had asked for clearance to land at Heathrow. There is something millenanan, almost Monty Pythonesque about it. Yet it was the subject of discussion this week in Brighton in that serious forum, the British Association for the Advancement of Science.

Dr Robert Muir Wood, a senior geologist with the engin-eering consultants. Principia Mechanica, displaying the fruits of his research into British earthquakes since the year 600, ended with a plea for the British, who "still believe earthquakes are about as English as pizza", to take the matter seriously and imitate the French and Germans by establishing a national network of monitoring stations.

Whitehall brims with contingency plans for disasters of all kinds, both man-made and acts of God, but not, it seems, for said there was nobody with a set of earphones crouching in a Whitehall cellar listening for tremors. Though the Institute of Geological Sciences, a part of the Natural Environment Research Council, does have a monitoring capability of a sort.

Dr Wood identified a number of earthquake-prone areas in Britain, one of which runs from the Pembroke Coast via Swansea to Hereford. A small earthquake in Hereford exactly eight years ago brightened the pages of an August Bank Holiday Weekend edition of The Times, as it surprised a sergeant in the Special Air Service at the Bradbury Barracks, who admitted that his regiment was not trained to withstand such shocks. It also inconvenienced a police sergeant who confessed that it has taken him an hour to console his parrot which fell from its perch. The headline "Earth tremor shakes Hereford Parrot" reflects just the kind of flippant attitude Dr Wood wants the British to drop.

Certainly, it cannot have been much fun in Colchester in April 1884 when chimneys toppled, church walls cracked and tiles poured off roofs. The phenomenon was taken much more seriously in the last century. The village of Comrie on the rim of the Highlands was dubbed by the Scots as their "earthquake capi-tal". The first seismometers in Europe were installed there in

But at least until really shaken, Dr Wood's fellow-citizens will not be easily pursuaded that they ought to be worrying about the movement of tectonic plates beneath the British crust. They have other things on their minds. If his strictures do find a response in Whitehall, the Home Office's revived civil defence effort might be adapted for postquake operations. And should the Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse land at Heathrow, well, the SAS are trained to handle that.

Surely the administrative history of the last 35 years in Britain and courses are in developing end of his distinguished career. Yours faithfully.

Second thoughts about the Rhine

From Vice-Admiral Sir Ian the continuing and financially McGeoch extravagant deployment of 35 per cent of the whole British Army (and Sir, General Sir David Fraser has argued (August 19) that the advantages which you ascribe to taking BAOR out of the line are illusory. In supporting him, I would go further. Such a course would, I believe, be prejudicial to Britain's security and endanger the peace of Europe.

The political reasons for the British commitment remain of overriding importance. These hinge, surely, upon the necessity to provide the Federal German Republic, as a non-nuclear Power, with adequate security. Failure to do so might well bring about a perception of insecur-ity in West Germany which would lead to a demand for increased armed strength. This the Soviet Union could only view apprehension, with the possibility of pre-emptive attack.

The feasibility of raising the nuclear threshold by exploiting the much more effective non-nuclear weapons now being developed may well indicate the need to after force deployments. If so, some modifi-cation of the British commitment may be agreeable to our Allies as well as to ourselves. Until then perhaps we should re-examine the way in which it is proposed to deploy and operate the not inconsiderable naval and air forces available to Nato in north-west European waters for the defence of shipping and the destruction of Soviet Naval air forces if they should attack,

It seems to be somewhat inconsistent, to say the least, to complain of the West German Navy "wasting resources acquiring an Atlantic capability while expressing concern about Nato's flanks and rear. As much flexibility of sea-air power as we and our Allies can achieve is essential in order to cope with "the unpredictable event" against which you so wisely warn. Yours faithfully,

From Mr Michael Chichester Sir, General Sir David Fraser's predictable response (August 19) to your constructive and forward-looking leader (August 17) emphasizes the ingrained opposition which will have to be overcome in any attempt to drag Nato's strategic doctrine into the eighties and simultaneously to modernize Britain's military role in the Alliance in line with develop-ments in technology and weapons, with the changed nature of the Soviet threat and, above all, with the

From Dr Adrian Flick

Sir, Paul Pickering's sceptical reference to Herne the Hunter's "socialist mysticism" (feature, August 4) culpably underrates Herne's peren-nial role in English culture - albeit in his better-known persona of Green Man - as the revolutionary new broom, or challenger of received assumptions.

Popularly acclaimed for his appearances in May Day ceremonies, on pub signs and in cathedrals, the Green Man is no stranger to films. Last Christmas, television viewers had a chance to see Nigel Green play his most celebrated literary namesake in Sir Gawain and the Green Knight.

That a medieval poem should be global and capable of damaging action against Western interests both within and beyond the Nato "area". You rightly point out the dangers of Soviet outlanking manoeuvres and proxy operations for neither of which Britain's Rhine Army is trained or equipped to deal.

Should an attack on western Europe be launched, despite the risks of nuclear escalation that such an initiative would carry for the Soviet Union, the modernization of Warsaw Pact forces, and the increased range and power of many of their weapons would enable them to accompany the assault on the central front with offensive action against lightly defended rear areas throughout the Nato area.

The United Kingdom base, the security of which is vital to enable Nato forces on the Continent to be reinforced and supplied, would be one of the primary targets for such action, which would include air and missile attacks, a mining offensive against ports, and possibly even landings by airborne troops. Yet current British defence policy, as enshrined in the 1981 Defence Review, is to weaken the Royal Navy to a nationally unacceptable level (see your front page article in today's issue - August 23), to make only modest and insufficient improvements in the air defences of the United Kingdom, but to maintain the present West German deployment whatever the costs.

Finally, it has to be realized that with present levels of defence costs Britain can no longer afford to maintain sufficient forces to sustain adequately each component of her historic multi-role contribution to Nato's collective security system and to provide for the security of national interests, whether at home

Mobility at the top

From Professor J. Coveney Sir, Mr George Walden's article "On your bikes at the top" (August 5) suggesting the establishment of a British version of the French Ecole Nationale d'Administration (ENA) is very timely, in view of the changes now taking place in the management of the Civil Service.

However, Professor P. G. Moore has missed the point in his letter (August 11) when he states that we already have parallels to the ENA in the UK in the shape of business schools, such as those at London and Manchester. The French, too, have their elitist business schools which are the true parallels with the UK business schools, they even have an international business school, INSEAD at Fontainebleau. an institution of very high reputation with which we have nothing to compare yet in this country.

The first step on the road to a British version of the ENA is to change the rules regarding mobility at the top of the Civil Service so that people like George Walden can enter politics and return at a later date to the Diplomatic Service without loss of pension rights, etc. Such mobility is perfectly possible in the French Civil Service and encourages a high level of entrant to the ENA who is not dedicated to spending his entire career as a civil servant. Rat and ratings

From the Director of Programmes of TV-am

Sir, It is flattering to be the subject of two leaders in The Times in the course of our six short months of life, but also it seems we can do nothing to please our journalistic elders and betters. When our ratings were down we were addressed as though we were the victims of some media holocaust; now they are beginning to mend we find ourselves transmogrified into a rat. Neither assessment is fair.

In fact TV-am produces more hours of television than any other commercial television company. Of these 21 hours a week, some two hours are devoted at weekends to children's programmes with an additional daily half-hour during school holidays. The nature of this output was spelt out in some detail in our franchise application and thus forms part of our undertakings to successful and Roland Rat a valued member of this team. Accordingly, at the outset of our first school at the outset of our first school holidays, he was duly given his head. His ratings, and subsequently Good Morning Britain's ratings, improved dramatically. As a consequence, Roland Rat and TV-am seem, in the eyes of some of our Fleet Street rivals, to be synonymous. But to judge our overall output solely by the Rat is like seeking shifts in BBC policy through an indepth analysis of the political stance of Blue Peter - or maybe its balanced successor Red Peter. Should any journalist - like rodents, perforce nocturnal - steel himself to rise early enough to join the increasing number of the public at large who watch TV-am's general output he would find a programme not only free of rats but containing 2 variety of items, popular and

Aims of picture gallery at Lord's

From Mr E. W. Swanton Sir, Reporting on allegations conning the authenticity of a number of pictures hanging at Lord's you correctly say (The Times, August 22) that our display is "nonetheless the most comprehensive collection of cricket memorabilia in the world". Your comment exactly expresses the aim of MCC since its famous treasurer, Sir Spencer Ponsonby-Fane, started in 1864 the collecting process which still continues today.

Our object is to present the game and its history, not to rival the Tate Gallery - though several of the pictures whose authenticity is now questioned have been shown there. The oil paintings in dispute are those collected by the first Sir Jeremiah Colman, whose son of the same name, father of the present baronet, Sir Michael, in 1947 generously donated to the MCC the 52 oils and 50 prints illustrated in The Noble Game of Cricket, published by his father. No doubt is cast on the prints nor on pictures of high quality such as "Village Cricket", by John Ritchie. Others are not given a high artistic (or insurance!) rating. In several cases Miss Diana Rait-Kerr, the then Curator, whose work in re-assembling the club's collection after the war, incorporating the Colman collection and furnishing the newly-built Mermorial Gallery, won general acclaim, expressed in the labels accompanying them her own reservations.

The Mail on Sunday, in a long debunking feature, characterized the collection as "to a large degree worthless rubbish", apparently on the evidence of Robin Simon who, with Professor Alastair Smart, is showing in several places an Accusing MCC of deception, the Mail on Sunday itself deceives. Two eighteeth-century pictures are shown one above the other, divided by a caption inferring that the one labelled "fake" is the one on display at Lord's. The truth is precisely the Implying MCC ignorance, the article queries the exact location of a match of 1860 near Charles Dickens' and also the involvement of his 11year-old son, and repeats exactly the points made in the label in the Memorial Gallery.

sorts at present on display at Lord's about 30 pictures are in need of label revision or replacement. This is being put promptly in hand. Meanwhile cricket-lovers will no doubt continue to patronize the exhibition of cricketana at Lord's, as do thousands each year, either individually or in groups - at a cost of 50p, not 75p as stated.

Mr Simon has not played with an impeccably straight bat. Yours faithfully.

Local income tax

From Mrs Laura Grimond Sir, Your leading article, "Tied hand and foot" (August 2) suggests that "there is no consensus on an alternative to the rates". But is this any longer true? On yesterday morning's Radio 4 programme we heard a Tory MP make an eloquent plea for a local income tax, recommended seven years ago by the Layfield committee and supported today by many people of all parties in local government, such as the present Convener of Strathclyde Regional Council and Mrs Patricia Kirwan, of the GLC (author of Londoners and the Rates), as well as others in academic circles and financial journalism. The Liberal Party, at its Assembly in 1982, passed by an overwhelming majority a comprehensive policy on local government finance of which two main features were a reformed system of grant and a local income tax (LIT), while its allies in the SDP also favour it as an additional tax to given the matter serious consideration it would seem that there is now a consensus that LIT is the only alternative to rates and many. believe that it is a better one.

What then is the obstacle to its introduction? It is hardly credible in an age when children speak the language of computer technology which the silicon chip has almost turned into a toy, that the cost and complication of calculating and collecting LIT prevents its introduction, already found possible in Canada and five European countries including Denmark, whose Kommunes are even LIT collectors. Is it not rather that the idea is anathema to the Treasury, who are unwilling to surrender what they see as a tool of economic management?

The record shows that local government has increased its spending less than has central govern-ment its follies come under closer scrutiny; where it fails is in accountability and in the motivation of its electors to act as effective policemen of local expenditure.

There are 24 million income taxpayers but only 15 million rate payers. Local elections, in which, according to the Director of the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy, only 17 per cent of those who vote actually pay rates, not surprisingly reflect national rather than local issues. The cure for inadequate democracy is not to transfer control to central government, which you, Sir, so well argue is not equipped to carry out the task, but to make it work better by reforming its system of finance.

Motorway accidents

From Dr Edmund 1. Cantilli

Sir, I have been in London participating in the Institute of Transportation Engineers' fifty-third annual meeting at Kensington Town Hall and I read your letter to the Editor on August 20 entitled, "When speed limits fail to save lives."

Mr Michael Macoun, in com-menting on August 17's "disaster on the M4", when "a truck careered out of control across the central reservation", points to North America as a case in point, where the "maximum speed permitted is 55-65 mph", as, apparently, a solution. I cannot speak for Canada (or Mexico), but I would assure Mr Macoun that, in the US at least, the 55 mph limit, which applies to every state, is not enforced and, indeed, is considered unenforceable.

But the solution to accidents of the type mentioned is contained in Mr Macoun's words describing a truck careering "out of control across the central reservation." There is no good reason for a vehicle of any size to be permitted to cross the central reservation. Proper barriers should be erected to prevent this type of accident from ever occurring again. Yours etc.,

have active and successful consumer and investigative units as well as providing unashamedly popular "tabloid" summertime entertainment live from all parts of Britain.

All this is consistent with our original franchise application in which we spoke of our aspirations which we spoke of our aspirations towards "popular journalism in all its facets". These are still our aims, as they are those of the publicly-funded producers of the BBC's highly professional, if vastly more expensive Brankfact Time. expensive, Breakfast Time.

But perhaps what rankles most about our new-found anthropomorphous identity is the growing realisation that both the means and the end of "popular" and "commer-cial success" are considered by our more erudite critics to be somehow intrinsically distasteful or discreditable. In our view they are neither.

Vivat Rat! Yours etc. MICHAEL DEAKIN, Director of Programmes, TV-am, Breakfast Television Centre, Hawley Crescent, NW1.

Areas of beauty training).

From Mr Frederick Gore, RA Sir, Very little public voice has been given to the concern felt for the village of Luddesdown, in Kent, since the announcement that the Ministry of Defence have purchased one third of the parish's acreage and are seeking permission to use the land as a military training area (minelaying and general infantry

Luddesdown is in the green belt some 23 miles from London. It is already classified as an area of outstanding natural beauty and a special landscape area. Part is in an area of high natural conservation value and it overlaps a site of special scientific interest. This proposal is believed to be contrary to the policies of both borough and county. The Army's need to find land close to existing training areas can be appreciated; but the respect which the ministry show for ecology and their care of farmland do not in this case allay alarm. To make only one point: there is obvious outstanding natural beauty in the narrow winding lanes with high banks and arched trees (where cars must back to pass). A little unwise improvement can easily destroy the remote charm of a place which is only a few miles from motorways and main roads.

The triangle between Wrotham, Gravesend and Rochester - from Cobham Woods to Birling Gap - is a very special, beautiful and much loved corner of historic Kent. Luddesdown, small and secret at its centre, should be sacrosanct. Such places are easily spoilt. Yours faithfully, FREDERICK GORE. Flat 3. 35 Elm Park Gardens, SW10. August 24.

August I I.

From Mr R. C. Griffiths Sir. Your "Whitehall Brief" of August 2 blandly reports that the present surplus of Government level and above - an inevitable result of the specialist mania which swept through Whitehall in the 1960s and 70s - may well be converted into administrators with the prospect of filling "mainstream policy jobs". The same solution is no doubt being advocated for the many similar surplus staff in other graduate specialities.

elsewhere must at last have convinced all objective observers that these "mainstream policy jobs" in the centre of the government economists at economic adviser machine require - cannot be well done without - a combination of strong intellectual powers, complete political objectivity, a pleasant personality, genuine motivation for this form of public service and a lifelong capacity for self-education.

There are some crucial manoeuvres to master. The circle turn is often a sensitive one. Flying into the wind a hang-glider is relatively easy to control, but downwind the aircraft accelerates and loses altitude rapidly.

Further progress extends to ridge soaring, riding the thrust of air as it strikes the edge of a hill, or circling in the bubbles of warm air that form thermals for extended flights. Finally, there is the challenge of cross-country flying, feasible on high-performance machines. The British record set last year by Robert Calvert of Preston is around people died in a year.

The agreement between the BHGA and the manufacturers of hang-gliders to sell aircraft only to the holders of pilot certificates is not legally binding but is strictly followed. According to the BHGA, 95 per cent of hang-gliding accidents can be attributed to pilot error. The most vulnerable pilots appear to be those who have qualified as Pilot Ones then joined a club where the training facilities are less well organized.

The most dangerous point occurs when a pilot allows his aircraft to go too slowly when the wind is blowing from behind. The hang-glider speeds up rapidly over the ground, but the actual rush of air over the wings may not be enough to keep the aircraft aloft. A downwind stall then happens, ultimate challenge in the sport, and if the aircraft is less than 100ft from the ground, recovery is impossible. A crash is the hillside. We struggled to gain control of a contraption which, weighing 60lb or so, was yards wide and flirted wilfully with every passing breath of wind. The wind, that day, became so strong we could tether the gliders to the ground and they flew straight up, like kites.

Gerry Breen (our hero) was bursting to try his brand new glider. The evening wind was strong enough for it to carry two. Being female, so relatively light, the flight was mine. (Don't knock the system when it's with

Green-black storm clouds were orange-lined and rolling away as the sun began to set. We moved to the hillside and simply stepped off. As easy as sport, perhaps one in five men high as a kite.

In the next days I learned -too late to be disenchanted -that it does take strength to carry the thing up a hill, but only until you have picket up the trick of holding the wires and letting it "fly" itself back up. Weakness and laziness were and teachers. The flort all good teachers. The first solo steps and few yards in flight were full of dizzying, unspecific apprehension. But it seemed to me that the men appreciated the chances of broken backs or crushed skulls more than most of the women: only one was too scared to leave the ground.

Indoors, taking lessons in the theory, I cursed past schools. Why didn't I - or the other females - know about air pressure and how it caused a right-shaped wing to fly? We had no vocabulary of vectors or sink and lift or thermals. But in our ignorance, we had no fear of Jes Flynn, who is at the centre this year, says 50 per cent of the inquiries about courses come from women. Very few book up - only one in two months, this summer. He reckons that only one in 10 women who learn, stick with the nation for the discrepancies, Jes answered: money, muscle and motor cars. Does he notice any gender difference in attitudes to flying once they are there? "Women", he says, "come along for the aesthetic airy freedom side of things. Guys tend to be more into the gung-ho Red Baron stuff." Of the handful of women who are internationally known as hang-glider pilots, Judy Leden is the best in Britain; her fans say the world. She took it up in 1979, and within weeks became university to take a job - any job - that would keep her in petrol and gliders. On her first flight, she reports that she giggled all the way down, and for the first months she knew there would always be a rush of adrenalin. But now, when she spends every weekend flying. it's more low-key and rarely

In July, Judy beat the bothsex distance record of 139 miles by flying 147 miles in a Californian desert. The record was taken from her the same day, so hers became the "ladies" distance" record. It does not seem to matter. Judy is often the only woman flying from a site, but it is a matter of indifference to her and, she thinks, to other fliers. It is not a macho sport; strength is not important, skill

Yet it is probably better to tour than to travel alone, if for no other reasons than that selfdrive car hire is almost nonexistent and that an escort almost certainly saves considerable trouble at the numerous security checkpoints.

To holiday in Syria, then, one needs to be searching for the past. To have a really pleasant time it is better to be ignorant of, or to ignore, the present. The perceived danger is, as particularly relevant. The only Way to the heart of France: Through the Lowe and genry like the Chateau of Chenou

"You will want to see the birthplace of Rabelais", she said, swerving round a juggernaut. Not that we had much choice, with our rucksacks stacked under the bonnet of her VW and the three of us beetling along the road from Chinon to Saumur. It was, she said, only a few kilometres out of our way. "I will take

So there we were at La Devinière, a fifteenth-century cottage festooned with drawings, maps, curling photographs and illustrations of Rabelaisian characters. A shrine, certainly, but not, perhaps the birthplace. Rabelais was born between 1483 and 1494, at a time when custom obliged expectant bourgeois women to set off for their country houses the moment labour began. If one can believe Gargantua - more or less his autobiography - Madame Rabelais brought the great man into the world somewhere along the road we had just travelled, probably soon after a vicious Outside, Marie, our benefactress, waited patiently, smoking Dunhills. You are thirsty perhaps? Come we will have a drink chez moi.

Then, in her eighteenth-century kitchen, its long walls encrusted with fine-art posters, we were introduced to her daughter and to the local rouge, poured from an unlabelled bottle. Marie was a teacher at a lycée in Chinon. Like us. she had seen the stunning Manet exhibition in Paris. We compared posters (hers, she explained, were to cover cracks in the plaster). We must come and stay, any time. There were many unused rooms.

of Rabelais, and admired what to watch his colour television, may be the last fortified for the French take camping farmhouse in the Loire. Then a tedious half-hour by the roadside while the French, with an impressive display of body language, gesticulated their reasons for not giving us a lift. Finally we made it to Saumur, where we were horribly cheated at a tourist cafe.

"I love France, but I hate the French", an English emigrée told us in Paris. "They're meanminded and they'll cheat you when they can." Like most generalizations, it told us more about its author than its subject. In the Loire, the heart of France, we found much kindness: information offered, maps

For these small mercies I was grateful, for it had been many years since I had hitch-biked.

The call of the open road had built on an island, with steep grown faint. But mortgage, bank loan and the cost of taking a car across the Channel combined to rule out a foreign holiday, or so it seemed. Cunningly, my wife and I caught a bus to Paris (£28 return) and thwarted the forces of stringency. From there we took a train to Chartres, and from there we stuck out our thumbs. We reckoned that by hitching and camping we could eat and drink our fill for a week and still return with change from £100. Only the lure of the duty-free shop defeated us.

And, of course, there is simply nothing to beat eating in her, and solemni France. The sensitivity of French fashion. service, the smiling bon appetit, the crusty bread, the prices ... For 48f in La Cafetière in Vendôme - and picture a quiet, garden in July on the banks of Le Loir (not to be confused with its grander sister) and 10 candlelit tables as dusk falls - I had lapin à la menthe (wonderfully stuffed), a salad mixed as only the French can mix them, a home-made sorbet.

At midnight we strolled happily back to the municipal camping site in which Ven-dôme, like most French towns, takes such pride. In front of our tent stood a Gallic figure in pyjamas, shining a torch into the river.

"Qu'est-ce que vous cher-chez, monsieur?" He answered not, but pointed to the shallows where small fish wriggled, mesmerized by the glare. With a net, he would have been a poacher, but he was just a curious amateur naturalist. Returning to the main road, And so to bed, we to our £24 seriously. Their tents are mar-

Medalling in modern art and history

The medallion has suffered from a bad reputation for almost 20 years. The pieces issued in their masses by some of the commercial producers have often shown scant regard to any pretence of artistic items - but they are also for handling and enjoying. Now the British Art Medal Society offers pronze medals for sale to its members. The society aims to encourage and promote the work of modern medallists and to see that the medal is more readily accepted as an art form. Members are asked to suggest both themes and medallists, though the society's council has strong enough position to advise institutions or individ-uals how to commission a medal. It hopes, too, that it will soon be able to sponsor an annual medal competition.

The society is already colla-borating with the Food and Agricultural Organization of the United Nations in organizing a competition for British artists to produce a medal to celebrate World Food Day on October 16, 1983. For artist members there will be forums to discuss the problems of medal making, and it is hoped that there will be exhibitions of the work commissioned.

The British Art Medal Socheld its inaugural meeting in April 1982, and it is now firmly established. In its first year the society commissioned eight medals, and members are obliged to purchase just one each from the annual election. Details of the medals are published and illustrated in a lively bi-annual journal, The Medal. There are no restrictions on membership and the individual subscription is £10 a year (corporate members £30). All the medals are sold at the same. eminently collectable price of £22, regardless of the medallist.

So far the small membership has spread its commitment to purchase over the full range available. The most heavily subscribed medal is one by Ron Dutton, which commemorates the founding of the society, and so far 32 have been sold. The society does not pretend to be in the business of mass-marketing. Nearly all of its bronze medals are cast to order and are truly Medals are such collectable limited editions.

The first eight medals issued illustrate clearly how wide a variation of style, texture and limited number of artistic cast art can be accommodated on a small two-sided piece of bronze. Ron Dutton's medal shows sheep grazing in open moor-land, while the reverse dedication to the society follows the plough furrows of an English country scene. Mark Holloway has produced a Muse, a doublesided head, using its own outthe final word. > Jane McAdam has used much the same restrictions with regard to shape on her portrait medal: Picasso's profile on the obverse forms the reverse outline of a modernistic head in the style of Picasso.

Jacqueline Steiger's medal, "Food Furrows", is a wonderfully tactile piece, with deep furrows stretching outwards from a central spine to the edge of the uneven roundish flan. Two medallists, Nigel Hall and John Main, have designed nonrepresentative pieces. Nigel Hall's medal adds a new dimension by being totally openwork, but both make bold use of line and depth.

Finally, Robert Elderton offers a more traditional commemorative medal of the heroine Grace Darling. On the obverse she is shown full face, while on the reverse she and her father row their small coble towards the sinking Forfarshire. The raging storm is emphasized by the great depth of the relief. and the legend, such as it is, follows the lines of the wind and waves on the reverse.

The standard of all the medals is amazingly high. The society has obviously crossed its curiously, Poland, Sadly this first hurdle by showing a serious means that the society cannot

From the British point of view the advantage of Colmar is that it is on the Victoria line. The cross-Channel rail connexion with the 10.30am boat train from Victoria stops at Colmar before rushing off to central Europe. The disadvantage is that in the summer it arrives at 22 minutes after midnight. But never mind, Colmar's grandest hotel, the Terminus-Bristol, is right opposite the station entrance and there is no need to fret about taxis.

The next morning con-noisseurs of railway architecture will note that Cohnar's station is one of the finest examples of its kind, complete with clock tower and apple green roof. Even the buffet de la gare is worth a look. It is vast for a town of this size, with anterooms off the main restaurant, whose high ceiling comes in a different shade of green, lavato-rial this time. Waiters doze, passengers eat, reasonably if not exceptionally. It is the ideal setting for a Gallic Brief Encounter The recommendation, though for those using Colmar as a base for a few days in Alsace is to stay at the Champs de Mars. From the outside it has no charm, but it is in a park, the welcome is warm although the restaurant poor, and the rooms (about £20 for a double) are very well appointed. It is also on the edge of the old city. Cross the Place Rapp, pass a glass-encased chip shop called L'Ami Frit (an obscure musical joke, I assume, as the best known opera set in Alsace is Mascagni's L'amico Fritz or L'Ami Fritz) and you are there.

Colmar is one of the few Alsetian towns to have emerged virtually unharmed from the last war. The forces of General de Lattre de Tassigny captured it almost intact on February 2, 1945 and that is the way the town council have kept it since. For a report on the wines themselves see Jane MacQuitty's column in Saturday. April 30. It is rare to find a bad bottle of Alsace, but I would, because of the high acidity of many varieties, counsel not going for the very cheapest. He should organize a trip to Colmar immediately to rectify the situation - and

Birth pains of a labour of love

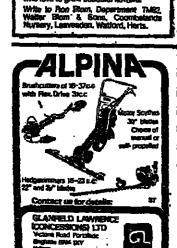

This week we begin The Times Garden Project. The idea behind it is to take an undeveloped garden in a inner-city area and huild it up into an attractive practical one. We have chosen a modest-sized garden in Fulham,

There is no point pretending: starting a garden from scratch is hard work. There are no short cuts. If preparation is not done properly and thoroughly, then success will be hard to come by. But there is much to do before the first clod is turned, and we shall begin with this less taxing form of will give an idea about the groups of plants you will be choosing from. Local conditions are all important. Aspect has a great bearing on any garden, and it is essential to planning to know the direction of the prevailing wind. Wind is more an enemy than a friend in any garden and strong winds must be taken into account. How does the sun strike your garden? Does it have sunlight all day, or is it a "morning" or "afternoon" garden? Remem-ber that the angle of the sun changes; the sun is much lower in the sky in winter than it is in summer. Consider any obstructions, be they buildings, plants' or bees, and try to track the sun's path across the sky so that any plantings are catered for properly. Paperwork Now that the garden has been placed squarely in its environment it is time to carry a piece of paper with you and make a > note of thoughts as they occur to you. You are going to need all the factors at your disposal so that detailed planning, once it starts, is well directed. Putting ideas on paper in some semblance of order is the first step towards crystallizing your thoughts and drawing up a finished plan. Even so, the finished plan must only be a guide and flexible enough to allow changes if something does not look right on the ground.

The Times garden is an oblong with a close-board fence on three sides and the house and natio on the fourth. It faces almost due south which means it will have good light or sun for most of the day. The terrace of houses which runs roughly east to west will protect the garden from the cold east and north winds and this means some tender plants can be considered.

Spadework

Now that you have exercised your brain, it is time to put your hands to work: levelling the ground and tackling the weeds. Weeds abound and the few deep-rooted ones must be coped with now. Bindweed, for instance, must be eradicated before planting because if it gets into the roots of established plants it is almost impossible to get rid of. Closer to the house is what I consider to be the worst weed in the garden, Oxalis Now that work is starting, it is corymbosa. Breaking ground

Cultivating must be done properly. The soil in The Times garden is good and it is easily broken up to depths of 15ig to 18in with a fork. Double digging in this case is not necessary. It might be worth hiring a cultivator with the capability of cultivating to a depth of 10in. This depth is sufficient for lawns and the borders, if considered necessary, could be due later. Make sure the ground is free from large bricks and stones, then take the cultivator to the required depth in a number of passes - 3in deep, then 6in deep and finally to the depth desired. Hire charges for cultivators, vary considerably but about £10 a day is average.

Last autumn when Herbert von Karajan was in Berlin making his recording of Carmen which should be in the shops by the end of next week complained of coarse interpretations of Bizet's opera. "My Carmen", he said, "will not smell of beer". He has kept his word. If recordings have a smell, like the flower Carmen throws to Jose, then here the scent is much nearer Latour than light ale. Coaxing and coaching: Leonard Bernstein at work

Hollow centre to the Bernstein Brahms

Bernstein has reached Brahms just in time for his 150th anniversary, and the new gilded box set looks very tempting. But, after much talk of contained rage in his own programme note, it transpires that he most intense thing about this cycle is its intense disappointment.

The Vienna Philharmonic play well, though not as well as under Keriesz, the live record-ing quality and balance is not all could be; but above all, the readings leave a hollow where the interpreter's response and that of the listener should engage. Bernstein claims to engage. Betastein claims to have spent "long and richly rewarding weeks" living and working with Brahms – just long enough, it seems, to penetrate enough of the surface, to underline it here or tailor it to a moment of self-projection

The First and Fourth Symphonies, which, I guess, mean most to Bernstein, also suffer the most. In both opening movements sforzandi and ritardandi are superimposed to substitute for organic thematic and dynamic growth, creating sparks rather than depth charges. While the slow movement of the Fourth is played better than almost anything else, its big central theme almost cracks under the weight of indulgence, and its counterpart in the first is flaccid and soft-focused. The finales, though interestingly detailed, lack a sufficiently coherent grasp of structure.

Bernstein is more at ease in the Second, which unfolds judged tempi, if with no greatly distinctive character. But while he judges equally well the Third's small scale, making no exaggerated claims, the last movement's elegy becomes intolerably mannered. Unlike the Bernstein Brahms hat off the press. Deutsche Grammophon's other major boxed set this month is a compilation of earlier separate recordings. Here are Anne-Sophie Mutter's earliest concerto performances from 1978 to 1982, valuable reference material for her burgeoning performing character.

Brahms is perhaps the least well served here, though the very sense of reaching out to a sufficient expressive amplitude has often quite compelling consequences. And the Mendelssohn, painstakingly lucid, does not yet deive deep but its slow movement epitomizes a quality also found in the Beethoven - a disarming and utterly individual inner repose, a sense of emotion, recollected in tranquillity and articulated through a fine, long singing line.

The two Mozart Concertos (the G and A Major) are the prizes of the box. The unforced simplicity of the outer movements restores a fresh translucency after so much high gloss, while the sheer naivety of response to the arching opening of the G Major slow movement finds there a secret hidden from more mature, but more cluttered wisdom. The blazon "direct metal mastering" and the word "Philadelphia" are eloquent heralds for the message of Muti's Scheherazade. True 10 form, this is a vibrant, immediate, ripe performance of shattering contrasts where sound and silence meet in their extremes. The vivid wind solos of the Kalender Prince, the massive string surge of the sea pulsate in the memory. But they inhabit a

A Major Sonata (a single disc reissue from a recent boxed set) is gruff and ungraceful.

Emotional ambiguity more often been found in Schubert by Alfred Brendel, But on his new single-disc release he tackles two early sonatas, in A Minor, (D537) and A Major (D664) which are less promising Brendel's way with their rather affecting naiveties tends to be rather brittle and withdrawn, and only rarely does an easy, clear, unforced lyricism make itself felt - notably in the flowing first movement of the A Major, which is a delight.

In recent close encounters with a compact disc player some of the best and worst sounds came from Decca recordings. Haitink's version of Shostakovich's Fifth Symphony was revealed as a stodgy, unclear piece of engineering, while Charles Duton's Falla disc, with the Montreal Symphony, blazed into spacious, well-blended life. Even on conventional equipment the fine qualities of Dutoit's new recording of Ravel piano concertos and piano transcriptions are dazzlingly evident; unfortunately Pascal Rogé's energetic slog through the two concertos cannot match this sense of atmosphere.

Our time, Jean Barraque once remarked, is one that imposes greatness on its artists, and it is good to have the opportunity to welcome back a record that shows how thoroughly he understood and responded to that challenge. Originally issued by Valois more than a decade ago, these are passionate, highpressure performances of two vocal works where desperation bursts out into abundant lyricism. Sequence, from the early 1950s, takes its bearings from Nietzsche; Chant après chant is part of a later, enormous project to make a galaxy of musical meditations on Hermann Broch's novel The Death of Virgil, recently lauded in these pages by Michael Ratcliffe as the thinking person's holiday read. For many people, no doubt, Josephine Nendick's doubt, unembarrassed performance and Noël Lee's magnificent pianism will open new paths into that labyrinthine book. But Barraque died 10 years ago this month, and if there is any composer around today capable of going in search of greatness it is Stockhausen. Indeed, in Licht, the cycle of

Refugees on Sunset Boulevard

A play whose characters include Tarzan and the Marx Brothers alongside Bertold Brecht and Thomas Mann is bound to have a certain zany quality about it apart from involving a clear clash of cultures.

Although the former group make only short appearances, they help to set the scene in Tales from Hollywood, by Christopher Hampton, which receives its British premiere at the National Theatre next week. It is the story of a colony of German and Austrian writers who, as emigrés and refugees from Fascism, found themselves in Hollywood during the last war. They were warmly wel-comed, but no one knew what to do with them once they had arrived. Their employment as screen-writers was both funay and a waste of time and talent.

Tales from Hollywood was commissioned by the Mark Taper Forum in Los Angeles, where it had its first performance last year. It received not entirely favourable reviews from

THE JAPANESE PRINT SINCE 1900 Street, London WC1 (636 1555). Until Sept 11, Mon-Sat 10am-5pm, Sun 2.30-6pm A show which graphically demonstrates the dilemma of twentieth-century Japanese artists caught between East and West. Some try to continue in the old woodblock tradition, as though the outside world did not exist; others try to reject the Japanese past in toto. As so often in such situations, the most interesting work is produced by those in the middle, finding fruitful Interaction between the disparate traditions. There is some good recent work, but a general tendency to ape Western rtists reduces its effectiveness Also at the BM, until Sept 18, the Cycladic Art exhibition of figurines, pots and metalwork.

CORNEL LUCAS The Photographers' Gallery, 5 Great Newport Street, Long WC2 (249 1969) Sept 3-Oct 8, Tues-Sat 11 am-7 pm Long overdue showing for Cornel Lucas, who has been in the business of portrait and fashion photography for more than 40 years. Prints on show, all made by Lucas himself, include photographs of the stars and models of the 1950s and 1960s which, through their contrived magery, epitomize the artificial world of feshion and film. Also on show until Sept 3 is London By Night, well worth seeing for Brandt's wartime reportage on the London Underground and Briefi Griffin's more recent chilling work. WILLIAM EGGLESTON

Henry Cole Wing, Cromwell Road, London SW7 (589 6371). Until Sept 18, Mon-Thurs and Sat 10 am-5.30 pm. Sun 2.30-5.30 pm Colour photographs of the American South by William Eggleston. The dye-transfer prints give an added intensity of colour which does little to hide the snapshot feel of the exhibition.

ROBERT MAPPLETHORPE Stills Gallery, 105 High Street, Edinburgh (031 557 1140). Until Sept 17, daily 10 am-6 pm First retrospective in this country (later to be seen in London) of American cult figure Robert Mapplethorpe. Prints on show include those of singer-poet Patti Smith, with whom Mapplethorpe lived for a number of years; the black, male, nude studies and the quietly erotic, almost fish-cold views of American musclewoman. Lisa Lyon.

Critics' choice ARDEN OF FAVERSHAM The Pft (628 8795) n-Fri et 7.30pm; matinée Thurs at 2pm. In repertory with Lear by Edward Bond (noday at 7.30pm) Terry Hands's gripping and perceptive production of the enonymous Elizabethan murder drama, now transferred from Strationd, reveals it as a tascinating, enigmatic classic. Jenny Agutter and Robert O'Mahoney play the adultarous couple whose attempts to kill h couple whose attempts to kill her stolid husband (Christoper Benjamin) combine pathos with agreeably black humour. CHARLEY'S AUNT Aldwych (836 5404) Until Sept 24, Mon-Fri at 7.30pm, Sat at 5pm and 8.30pm; matinée Wed at 2.30cm Griff Rhys Jones makes one of the best "aunts" ever in a joyous production with an excellent

THE FAWN loe (928 2252) Thurs and Fri at 7.30pm. In repertory with The Seggar's Opera today at 2.30pm and 7.30pm; Mon-Wed at 7.30pm

Plamboyant, witty and thoughtful National Theatre revival of John Marston's Jacobean comedy which combines contemporary satire with some strewd vignettes of the war between the sexes. Bernard Lloyd's virtuosity and intelligence as a duke observing in disguise (shades of Measure for Measure) hold it all together.

Negatively speaking, Gaslight does not exist. It has nothing to do with semantics to say that the supreme story, to be screened on Channel 4 tomorrow (2.30-4pm), is possibly the film world's most notable example of two negatives making a positive. Thorold Dickinson's 1939 movie, based on the Patrick Hamilton stage play, was at one time given over for lost. The shocking news that came out of Hollywood in 1944 was that MGM had perpetrated Having decided to remake Dickinson's British film, and having acquired the original negative, MGM was reported to have destroyed the negative so that the new version (Gaslight in the US, The Murder in Thornton Square in Britain) would not be around to allow comparisons to be made. Worse, there were rumours that all prints of Dickinson's film had been got rid of, too.

The Murder in Thornton Square, directed by George Cukor, was in some ways (acting, script, décor) superior to Gaslight. In other ways (essential claustrophobia, camerawork) it

Then, in the early 1950s, a minor miracle (major miracle by filmland standards) occurred. Several prints of Dickinson's Gaslight turned up in America. Another negative was prepared from them and prints were run off, and soon the film was being re-shown throughout the US under yet another title, Angel Street.

The reviews were, in the wildly enthusiastic main, Anton Walbrook, as the husband who tries to drive his wife (Diana Wynyard) insane so that he can get his hands on some hidden jewels, was hailed - for the second time round as a newcomer of staggering promise. A nonsensical claim, because Walbrook had been adding to his laurels throughout the 1940s with films such as The Red Shoes, another Dickinson period film The les, and The Life Ouren of Space and Death of Colonel Blimp (to be screened on BBC2 at 1.50pm on Mon).

takeover bids on the London Stock Exchange are, on the whole, both just and sophisticated. They are the product of long years of experience in trying to maintain fair markets and protect the interests of shareholders in the face of boardroom, merchant bank and stockbroker machinations geared solely to

Yet even the best of rules can lead to, and indeed create, bizarre situations.

The small shareholder in Waddington, the John paper company, can now reflect that the complications of Monopoly, the boardgame for which Waddington famous, are as nothing compared with what he now sees before him.

Robert Maxwell's BPCC, claiming 47 per cent accept-ances of his takeover bids at one moment and apparently well on the way to victory, even though a large body of shareholders had publicly committed themselves not to accept.

they are entitled to do until cash alternative to the share-for-share offer has holders, large and not so large, are being bombarded by both sides by telephone, meeting and any other known form of communication.

To complicate matters further for the ordinary shareholder, the institutions withdrawing from BPCC's offer are not necessarily declaring their confidence in Waddington, because some are selling in the market to take advantage of a share price higher than BPCC's cash offer. share offer.

Mr Maxwell's side. nonetheless, cannot buy these shares because it would have to offer cash to all equal to the highest cash price paid and has already declared its cash bid as final. Mr Maxwell is friends are likewise not allowed to buy in the market and then accept his share offer.

Somebody, somewhere, must therefore have full confidence in Waddington's management and the rapid turnround in profits on which its defence was based. It is a brave man who will write off the determined Mr Maxwell. but small shareholders who do not want to stick with Waddington, should probably also sell at today's

The immediate lesson is that some takeover bidders are becoming too clever for their own good. The tactic of declaring your takeover bid "final" is a good way to frighten shareholders into accepting, but can come unstuck when the stock market is booming, as Mir Gerald Ronson discovered in his quest for UDS.

More generally, it is clear that shareholders should be wary of takeovers of companies just at the point of cyclical recovery in profits.

Here, the bitter lesson came from London Brick, whose offer for Ibstock Johnsen was delayed but finally allowed by a Monopolies Commission investigation.

In the meantime, Ibstock, had recovered so fast that it was not worthwhile for London Brick to buy at the higher price now necessary.

invectors now find themselves caught up in the crossfire of bullion dirty dealing. In the last couple of weeks, Customs and Excise officials have been buzzing round City of London financial institutions trying to piece together a jigsaw sunggling and tax evasion.

In April, 1982, Sir Geoffrey Howe, the then Chancellor, slapped a 15 per cent value edded tax on gold coins such as kragerrands and sovereigns. Previously, coins, unlike gold bullion, had not been VATable and this made it simple for professional criminals to melt iown coins, sell them as builion bars and take a guaranteed 15 per cent profit every time.

With that wheeze denied them, the gold swindlers have found an easy alternative. They employ the same tactics - but having first bought the coins in a non-VATable territory such as lersey and transported them to the mainland.

*Below £25,000, mortgage repayments are made net of tax relief. However, mortgage interest tax relief is granted on loans up to £30,000 for the current tax year but borrowers with mortgages between £25,000 and £30,000 are still obliged to make gross repayments and claim tax relief in the usual way. Tax relief is not granted on interest on any excess over £30,000.

Moment of truth for Victory

Three years ago Peter de Savary, a entreprensur, with only superficial knowledge of America's Cup racing, set out with unlimited enthusiasm and money to coordinate the most comprehensive British bid ever to challenge for the "and mang". The moment of truth is at hand.

Tomorrow afternoon sees the cimex of his highly extrovert, multi-million pound campaign, which had been a showbiz amalgam of hardnessed professionalism laced with vanty, patriotism forthsimo spiced with a conviction, that not challenger had previously prepared scriously enough to march the Americans at their own high-tech game.

Now, deservedly, Victory '83 represents the Royal Buraham YC in the challengers' elimination final best-of-seven against the brilliant and controversial Australia II of Alan Bond. Few people sectionally give the British bout a chance, yet many concede that either finalist is probably capable of giving the American defender—either Liberty or Courageous—a difficult time. That is a tribute to de Savary.

Tomorrow's first race is critical. The point for de Savary to peader, when his beautiful royal bise and gold compaterized toy heads out for the start pursued by a 1,000 strong apectator fleet, is whether he has made the most of his expensively expended recovery. In the purily

The British crews go on trial tomorrow in the world championships on the Duisburg Wedau course, and the pruspects of the 12 crews are not too healthy, an event contested by 32 nations. British hopes ride on Beryl Mitchell in the women's single sculls, the men's lightweight coxless four and the men's heavyweight coxless four.

Caracas (Agencies) - The drugs at the games. A report from Canadian, Gay Greavette, who the Pan American Sports Organis-returned his two Pan American ation (ODEPA) medical commission Games weightiliting gold medals on Monday after giving a positive dope test, has admitted taking anabolic steroids in preparation for the weightiliters for using the steroids, and four others for monecrified

The British four is stroked by John Bland, of Oxford, a tough competitor, who has good men behind him. The men's heavyweight coxed four has a wealth of experience, with Beattie, McNuff, Cross and Budgett holders of Olympic and world medals, but the pressure is on them here to produce the goods.

Cook demoralizes New Zealand

TRENT BRIDGE: New Zealand, with three first innings wickets in hand, are 285 runs behind England. New Zealand were cruising quietly along in the fourth Cornhill Test match yesterday, on a lovely evening and in ideal batting conditions. They had got to 124 for two, in reply of England's total of 420, where they last form wickers in 120, when they lost five wickets in seven overs for 11 runs. Willis will almost certainly have to decide this morning whether or not to make them follow on. If, given the chance, he decides not to take it, it will be because the pitch is at its best and there is no rest day. Despite that, though, New Zealand would seem to be there for the taking Without Wright, their steadiest batsman, and with Crowe able to hat only in discomfort, owing to a dislocated finger, and after letting England off the hook on Thursday, they must be thoroughly

That started it. Edgar, who had gone in first and played admirably for nearly three hours and a half, now forced a shorter ball from Cook to straight short leg, where Garting, some 12 yards from the bat, fell to his right for a nice catch. The ball looked to stop a little, perhaps to turn. The anchor, anyway, was gone. Gray was next to go, run out by Botham from slip after a yes-no-yes with Hadice, the non-striker. Hadlee then cocked Cowans to short leg making a rather poor effort to ward off a short, fast ball. Coney had been out in the 51st over, Edgar in the 53rd and Gray in the 55th. Hadlee went in the 58th and 55th. Hadlee went in the 58th and Lees in the 61st, leg-before playing no stroke to Cook. Crowe, wincing, survived for the last half hour.

Until Coney was out, England's bowling had looked decidedly plain. Botham had seemed stiff after his hundred of the day before; Willis hundred of the day before; Willis had laboured rather; Cowans had presented no problems. Spin, or the hint of it, did the trick, based on strict control - a recipe as old as the

In marvellous light and a perfect temperature for batting, Edgar and Howarth put on 76 in 24 overs. Ten minutes before tea Howarth drove Cook straight back at him at a comfortable height. More a no. 6 than a no. 4, Coney now filled the breach. Just before Howarth was out Willis had decided to bring on Gatting. Howarth's dismissal brought no change of plan. Under most other captains Coney would have been greeted by Willis himself. As the players took drinks at five o'clock, those among another good crowd who had watched yesterday's play and not Thursday's may have been feeling cheated. They had seen

Middlesex close gap on Essex

LORD'S: Middlesex (23pts) beat Surrey (5) by 103 runs.

To forestall any counting of chickens in Chelmsford and enirons, Middlesex comprehensively defeated Surrey yesterday to reduce ocreated Surrey yesterday to reduce the margin at the top of the county championship, sponsored by Schweppes, to 14 points – and remember that the defending champions have a game in hand. As in most of their reviews 10 wine in most of their previous 10 wins this season j(the last was on August 2) they were indebted to their spin bowlers, Emburey and Edmonds, who shared eight of the wickets, and to smart close ciching.

Emburey, captain in Gatting's absence, had challenged Surrey to score 244 in 200 minutes. It was a fair though by no means easy target on a pitch offering turm. Surrey, however, made an indifferent start and Lynch who might have put cheaply. After that they opted to play for a draw but were ultimately bowled out in three hours and have not now won a championship match at Lord's for 12 years.

Middlesex had prolonged their second innings until half an hour after lunch, adding 161 runs. Miles gave further encouragement with his 59, sharing a stand of 87 with the great improviser, Radley, and Tomlina again showed himself a handsome striker of the ball. He was one of four cheap victims for Curtis. Williams took the first two Surrey wickets, Butcher for the second time in the match being caught at deep

The most useful thing he did was to put the ball in the goalmouth from a long corner and in the scramble Francis pushed the ball over the line to win the match for England in the last minute of extra time. Francis had made a dramatic entrance as a substitute six minutes before the end to score the equalizer with his first touch.

Up to that time Scotland had been going very well. They had taken the lead through Leiper who converted a short corner in the 16th minute and they survived the severity of the upmires who put three of their players, McPherson, Leiper and Tom Hay, under temporary suspension.

The Scots, who alway looked sharper in attack, were a little sharper in attack, were a little unjucky to lose. They had a chance of winning in the last three miantes of extra time when they forced a short corner from which Taylor in the England goal saved well in the end, however, a misunder-standing in defence between Pappin, the Scottish goalkeeper, and Middleton led to the long corner from which England won the match.

Shareef Dancer is valued at world record $40m

One million dollars is the asking price for a share in Shareef Dancer. This places an overall value of $40,000,000 on Shaikh Maktoum al Maktoum's Irish Derby winner. If successfal this syndication will set a new world record figure as it is $3.8m more than the $36.2m established for Conquistador Cielo in the United States in

The terms are as follows; a down payment of $200,000, followed by four further instalments of $200,000 in each subsequent year. The owners will pay all insurance charges. The proposed syndication is said to have met with a favourable response, although there have been some refusals. The previous largest figure for a stallion to stand in Europe is the £10m placed on the illfated Shergar after his retirement to stud by the Aga Khan in 1981. By comparison, a nomination to Mill Reef commands about £70,000. If Mill Reef was the same age as Shareef Dancer, this would place an unofficial value of about £15,000,000 on the

The reason that the Maktoum's are able to demand so much for the services of Shareef Dancer is because of the residual value of the Northern Dancer blood. In Europe alone this season the 23-year-old prepotent Kentucky-based stallion or one of his sons, Nijinsky up by any horse this season in and the Minstrel, have sized his Sussex States victory, so his wood, Gorytus, a son of Nijinsky, can further hammer home the lessons of Northern Dancer's Supremacy in the Waterford Crystal Mile.

Gorytus has not turned out to be the super-horse that his first two impressive victories as a two-year-old suggested. However, on both his appearances this season this outstandingly handsome individual has run well in soft going. He finished fifth to Lomond in the 2,000 Guineas and at York recently he looked dangerous two furlongs from home before weakening in the closing stages to take fourth place behind Caerleon in the Benson & Hedged Gold Cup. That performance suggested that Gorytus will be etter suited by a mile and like all of his breed he is known to favour fast ground

If Sandhurst Prince were to find the ability that saw him romp home in this race last year, Guy Harwood's Pampapaul colt would have to be the antoatic choice.

The word from Newmarket is that Adonijah is strongly fancied to improve on his tally of four victories from five starts for Henry Cecil this season. Prince Khaled Abdullah has every reason to congratulate himself on his judgment in deciding to buy the three-year-old on his own initiative. However, good horse though adonijah is, wouldbe surprising if he possesses the pace to match his rounds for speed under these conditions. It a finement these conditions. In a fascinating affair Gorytus is a confident choice to silence his critics.

The Fitzroy House Stakes and the Philip Cornes Nickel Alloys Stakes final are the most valuable races at Newmarket. Guy Harwood is the trainer with the team of two year-olds most likely to threaten Henry Cecil's probable supremacy in the major tests that lie ahead in the autumn. Lear Fan, Roussillon and Having completed a double for Heremy Hindley on Fawzi and Asswan at Baden-Baden yesterday, Brian Taylor broke his collarbone when his mount, Brave Memory fell. Brave Memory had made smooth headway and was going well on the heels of the leaders when coming down half a mile out with goals by Burns, Sinnamon, McConnell and Morris and could, if they beat Poland today, finish ninth. Wales lost 1-0 to Poland and must play off with Austria for eleventh England now play France today for fifth place.

Ireland easily beat Austria 4-0

RESULTS: European championship: classifi-cation metches: for 8th to 12th place: Wales 0, Poland 1; Ireland 4, Austria 0. For 5th to 8th places: England 2, Scotland 1; Belgium 1,

IN BRIEF

FOOTBALL: Bobby Moore, recently appointed chief executive of Southend United, has been made a director of the club. Mark Rubin. chairman, has resigned and his place has been taken by Andrew McCutchon spokesman and financial advisor to the business consortium who have taken over Sheffield Wednesday fans were warned yesterday not to travel to Derby County on Monday without a ticket for the match. The Baseball Ground terracing has been closed for the game by the FA after crowd trouble last season. Only 1,500 stand tickets have been sent to stand there is have been sent to Sheffield and Derbyb fans wanting to see the game have to buy an £8 "double ticket", covering the Sheffield game and Derby's next home game against Swansea.

SCOTLAND'S NUMBER ONE QUALITY SCOTCH WHISKY

SCOTCH WHISKY

One busy day in the life of a girl apprentice jockey

By John Karter The tale of beauty and the beast has taken a new turn with Gay Kelleway's arrival among the ranks of the professional jockeys. Since intruding on this male-dominated sphere two months ago, the 19-year-old daughter of Paul Kelleway, the Newmarket trainer and former leading National Hunt rider, has swiftly shown Messrs Pippott. Carson and Eddery that a woman's touch can do as much for a highly-strung racehorse as mere muscle. As recently as Thursday Miss Kelleway beat Carson and Eddery with a perfectlyjudged finish on her father's promising filly, Gilt Star, at Brighton.

Her trainer, who said: "We shall have to call her 'Scobie' (referring to Scobie Breasley, the legendary Australian rider) . . . that's the way he used to come and win his

However, Miss Kelleway's celebrations were short-lived as the Jockey Club, the ruling body of the sport, announced that they would be lodging an objection against her last four winners (including Gilt Star). This is because, having ridden 10 winners as an amateur, Miss Kelleway had claimed an apprentice allowance greater than she was entitled to (that is to say 7lb instead of 5lb). Miss Kelleway is certainly bred for the job. Her father included the successes over jumps and her mother was a leading pointto-point rider. Her two brothers help with all aspects of work in the stables, as does Miss Kelleway, who rises at 5.30 every day to muck out the horses and ride them out at exercise before setting off to compete at various racecourses up and down the

Reagan puts off reelection decision

From Nicholas Ashford Washington

President Reagan has decided o delay announcing whether or not he intends to seek a second presidential term until the end of November or even early December, according to White

The President has been expected to make his decision known soon after the September 5 Labour Day holiday, on his return to Washington from his ranch in California. However, he has told his aides he will not make a formal announceent until after his return from a tour of the Far East in mid-Novemb-

The delay has once again nelled speculation about his plans for next year's elections. The overwhelming feeling among members of his staff and Republican Party leaders is that he will seek a sound term. Many of his closest advisers have said

This view has been reinforced by the President's decision this week to give his tacit approval for the formation of a reelection committee to plan his campaign if he decides to run again.

The President reportedly told his advisers he had no objection to the committee's formation so long as he was not forced to commit himself until after his return from the Far East.

But a nagging doubt persists in the minds of some of his advisers that Mr Reagan, who will be 74 next year, may decide against seeking a second term. It is pointed out that if he does intend to stand down he would delay his announcement as long as possible to avoid becoming a "lame duck" President too

Mr Reagan, who has been interruping his summer holidays this week by making a series of speeches along the West Coast, has carefully avoided making his intentions known even to his closest advisers. But in his recent public appearances he has looked more like a candidate trying to woo voters than a President trying to explain

In the garden

The hot dry weather has caused wooden gates and fences to shrink and it would be wise now to treat the wood with a preservative. The new water-borne Woody is easily sprayed or brushed into the joints that have shrunk. If they are not treated, water may get in later and cause rotting.

Lift and dry onions. Use those with thick necks first as they will not with thick necks first as they will not keep. The the rest in ropes and store in a frost-free place. Garlic may be lifted and dried now.

Protect pears from bird damage by tying a plastic bag over the fruits – make some holes in the bottom of the bag. If wasps are a nuisance try to find the nest and destroy it with a wasp killing compound.

The papers

The idea of a national minimum wage, which seems close to becoming Labour Party policy, seems attractively simple but is a deadly same. The Dally Mall says. Not only would it make inflation whirl faster and faster, but a lot of low-raid into a rould dispense. low-paid jobs would disappear altogether. The weakest members of the labour force, the very people it was intended to benefit, would increasingly be priced out of work.
